Controversy Over Prevention Methods Likely to Be Issue in Congress

QUESTION HAS ASSUMED NATIONAL IMPORTANCE

Economic Effects of Present Flood Said to Concern All Sections of Country

Special from Monitor Bureau WASHINGTON, May 17-The most important and far-reaching political and economic issues and interests are involved in the problem of flood control and now become the chief topic of discussion in the capital.

One of the greatest economic issues confronting the American people today-water power-enters directly into the old controversy over prevention methods.

The immediate contest centers about the method for curbing such floods as the Mississippi Valley is now experiencing and has been enduring for over a century, despite the expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars for inundation prevention. The two groups opposing

Since 1879, when, tollowing a great inundation; the Federal Government appropriated the first funds for levee construction, approximately $200,000,000 has been spent in the Mississippi Valley, from Cairo, Ill., so the Gulf of Mexico, for levee protection. Of this amount the Federal Government contributed $55,000,000, local communities $150,000,000 local communities

New Importance to Nation

These vital factors have given the issue of flood control an importance that it has never before had. In the past the "levees only" plan, while encountering opposition was allowed to proceed. The argument of its proponents cacy and again opened the issue of flood control as a major national problem. It will be one of the outstanding controversies of the next Congress. And as such it will have all-important political significance.

So far the spokesmen for the Administration dearing issue, Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, and Dwight F. Davis, Secretary of War, have approved of the In a public Administration dealing with the "levees only" system. In a public statement Mr. Hoover criticized a project that the "by-pass spillway" advocates are sponsoring, the O'Con-nor bill calling for an independent commission to investigate the prob-lem of flood control and make lem of flood control and make recommendations to Congress.

"It is essential that at this time," Mr. Hoover said, "when the need for rehabilitating the overflowed regions and of fully safeguarding the remainder of the valley is most urgent, time and money be not wasted in the consideration of visionary measures of relief. It is my judgment that the feasible means of guarding against future flood disasters on the lower Mississippi is the adequate widening and raising of the levees on the main river and tits backwater tributaries and the extensions of bank protection, with the possibility of special treatment in special situations in the lower valley."

A debate on the air budget followed, when Signor Balbe, under-secretary for aviation, speaking about air defense and the recruiting and training problems in connec-tion therewith, stated that the de-partment of air service should collaborate closely with the anti-aerial artillery, being placed under the same command. Italy must also organize its air defense upon such a sure national basis that the country would be entirely independent of other sources for material. The Duce, he stressed, ardently desired to see a wholly Italian-built engine consuming heavy oil, for aviation purposes, which, when constructed, would solve many problems. Such an engine was now well under way. The Government like-wise gave much thought to perfecting civil aviation and new lines link-ing up Italy with the Near East would be started as soon as the bud-

Prohibition: Its Economic and Industrial Effects

"BIG BUSINESS" OF NATION IS SURVEYED BY IMPARTIAL SEEKER FOR FACTS

Thousands of Employers and Employees Reply Frankly to Questions Put During Nine Months of Research -New and Important Data Uncovered

By PROFESSOR HERMAN FELDMAN

Of the Amos Tuck School of Administration and Finance, Dartmouth College, Article I. The Neglected Aspects of Prohibition

HIS series of articles summarizes the results of a comprehensive survey of the economic and industrial aspects of prohibition. The purpose is not to promote some particular point of view, but to present accurate data of a sufficiently comprehensive character to allow the thoughtful citizen to judge for himself. The articles may lead some readers to definite conclusions; they will leave others in doubt; in either case they will have achieved their purpose. There are special reasons for choosing the economic and industrial spects of prohibition for attention, to the exclusion of every other phase. The public seems to have heard enough, pro and con, about individual liberty, poison liquor, home brew, speak-easies, padlocks, graft, and the like. These are the sensational and spectacular sides of a subject which lends itself peculiarly to rumor and exaggeration. For too long a while these have occupied the center of the stage to the detriment of more fundamental features. In particular, the economic aspects to be treated here have either been neglected entirely or misrepresented. The writer has diligently searched for one scholarly, expert analysis of this phase of the subject. It appears that most of what has been written since the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment has been for the purpose of bolstering one side or the other. There is every reason, therefore, for an impartial and objective survey of the subject, limited to what the actual data show, and written by someone himself removed from the fray.

Survey Entirely Impartial

Preconceived opinions have played no part whatever in the present series of articles. The writer had none. He has never been connected with any movement or association supporting one side or the other. He approached most of the subjects which he has treated quite in the dark as to what the actual statistics, data, and other information would show. Newness to the subject, in this case, proved a distinct advantage in point of view. It is hoped that aside from this statement of impartiality, the unbiased character of the survey will become more and

An Elaborate Survey of the Facts

The factual basis of the series will be clearer if the methods of investigation employed and the sources of information tapped are mentioned in conjunction with an outline of the high spots which the survey has touched. This will give the reader an idea of what may be expected in future articles. The writer has spent a good part of nine months in this investigation: he has conferred with leading authorities, visited a considerable number of plants, examined all the pertinent printed material, and traveled over an area including the six states of New England and New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Maryland, and other states to collect the facts. In addition he has corresponded by letter and questionnaire with thousands of persons throughout the country who were believed to be in a position to supply information. A few examples of these efforts will now be mention

Was the Liquor Industry Declining Before Prohibition?

Since it has been urged in many quarters that the temperance movement in America had already progressed to such a point that we should have had substantial diminution of the liquor traffic within a short time, the official statistics of the production and consumption of alcoholic drinks have been examined, and the subject will be discussed,

Near Beers, Soft Drinks, and Other Substitutes

The knowledge of the public seems quite vague with regard to the extent to which near beer, ginger ale, grape juice, and other soft drinks have inherited the thirst that formerly went for alcoholic beverages. There have also been many who have wondered to what extent people have taken to candy, ice cream, coffee and tea, and similar substitutes. To supply information on these points, a statistical survey was made of the changes in consumption of the principal drinks and foods which might conceivably benefit from prohibition, and the chief trade sources and trade association in these lines canvassed,

Has Prohibition Increased Drug Addiction and Smoking?

The allegation that prohibition has increased drug addiction calls attention to a possibility of so grave a character that special pains were taken to get all the reliable information available on this subject. In the same article, the question as to whether the tobacco industry has benefited from liquor restriction is discussed

Would Modification of the Volstead Act Bring Farmers Relief? To test out how far the agricultural industry has been affected by the loss of the demand for certain grains used by brewers, distillers, and wine makers, a detailed study was made of all the materials so used, and an estimate made of the proportion which these were of the total crop produced. Some illuminating conclusions have been drawn

The Experience of Industry With Prohibition

The experience of industry with prohibition is connected with at least two kinds of prohibition. The first is the restriction which plants themselves have set up through their own rules and regulations: the second is their experience since the Federal Government lent its arm with restrictive legislation.

On this part of the survey in which information seemed particularly lacking the chief emphasis was placed, resulting in what is probably the most comprehensive investigation of its type ever undertaken in America. A similar report by the United States Commissioner of Labor, in 1897, covered more firms but was confined to a more restricted field

A Letter From Prof. Feldman

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR EDITORIAL BOARD

A question which some of my friends have raised leads me to believe that some of your readers also may wonder whether the declared position of The Christian Science Monitor in strong support of prohibition has led your Board to make suggestions to me intending to influence my attitude in this series. The thought is a natural one under the conditions, and it seems best to meet the issue frankly.

I am at a loss for words that would state as clearly and forcibly as I desire that not even the slightest hint of that sort was ever made to me. In the two brief conferences I had about the series with members of your Board, all the stress was put on impartiality of investigation and presentation, and on comprehensiveness and authoritativeness of data. Aside from considering the subjects to be included in the series and the lengths of the articles, I was given no advice or assistance. I really cannot conceive how I could have been given more freedom; indeed. I believe the responsibility put upon me was more than may have been desirable, since I have not had the benefit of the criticiam and advice which seems an expression of personal attitude, the responsibility is certainly mine.

Although this letter is intended selely as an explanation, I cannot refrain from using the occasion to express my highest admiration for your broad-minded editorial pulicy shown with respect to this series of articles on prohibition, and I am very grateful to you for it.

Yours sincerely, I am at a loss for words that would state as clearly and forcibly a

MAYOR OUTLINES SERVICE TO CITY FOR EXECUTIVES

Calls Conference, on Signing Budget, and Asks for Co-operation

PRAISES CITY COUNCIL FOR NONPARTISANSHIP

Declares Too Much Time Is Wasted on Budget and Announces Change for 1928

Mayor Nichols' signature today put into effect the city's appropriation bill for 1927 as proposed by him on the basis of a $13 tax limit, amounting in all to $30,523,463.98. Shortly after the Mayor had signed the budget of appropriations for the city departments under his direct ontrol, he sent for the heads of departments, their chief clerks and executive officers, from 50 to 75 in number, to meet him in his office. There he told them that service, speed, efficiency and thoroughness in carrying on all the various activities for the support of which the people pay the taxes, must be the course by which the administration and its departments must be governed this year.

Mayor Criticizes Procedure

The Mayor reviewed the passage of the budget, the proparation of which began as far back as last November. He said that too much time, too much expense and too much labor had been tion to the proceedings of the City Council yesterday where by a vote of 13 to 9, the budget he had proof 13 to 9, the budget he had proposed after he was allowed the $13 tax limit, was substituted for that proposed by the council's committee of appropriations amounting to $30,-262,463, or some $261,000 less than Mr. Nichols had asked for the operation of the departments for which he is financially responsible under the charter.

under the charter. Points to Non-Partisanship The Mayor said today that he was pleased that the council by its votes yesterday proved that it was remembering that it had been chosen as a nonpartisan body and pointed out that seven Democrats and six Republicans had contributed the 13 votes by which his budget was passed and the disputed items of expenditure maintained.

Voting in favor of the budget submitted by Henry Parkman Jr., chairman of the council committee mitted by Henry Parkman Jr., chairman of the council committee on appropriations, and for cuts aggregating more than $250,000 from the Mayor's bill, were two Republicans and seven Democrata.

Nearly every member of the City Council spoke during that long debate yesterday afternoon as to whether the report of the appropriations committee reducing the budget so substantially or the schedule of appropriations estimated as essential by the Mayor, should be adopted. Mr. Parkman stated the case for the council's committee which had spent practically a month in scrutinizing the Mayor's figures, while Robert G. Wilson, of Dorchester, and Charles G. Keene, of West Roxbury, supported the estimates proposed by Mayor Nichols.

MAKERS OF BATTERIES ADOPT HONESTY CODE

CHICAGO, May 17—A code of ethics was adopted by battery manufacturers here at a meeting with representatives of the Chicago Better Business Bureau. The first recommendation was that each battery must be branded with the correct rating figure, or with the maker's name and type of symbol number from which the rating may be determined. Preferably this rating should be on the box itself, it was agreed.

In each catalogue or other piece of advertising matter, dealers are to be advised of the rating method employed and what any type of symbol numbers may mean, it was decided. Manufacturers agreed to decline to misbrand batteries made for others, or to deliver batteries in over-size boxes.

Job Use Oil Burners

CLEVELAND, O., May 17 (Special)-The "No Smoking" sign has been hung out and is being enforced against the big steam shovels doing the excavating for the new wings for Cleveland's Public Hall.

Elliot He Whitlock, city smoke mmissioner, ordered that engines driving the shovels use oil burners. His order has been complied with and the job is being done without the usual belching smoke that accompanies such work. Mr. Whitlock's office is almost over where the work is being done, and he said he could not allow smoke at such close range, especially as he is in the midst of a campaign against

Federal Council's Survey Finds No Lawful Basis for Intervention

Special from Monitor Bureau NEW YORK, May 17-The United

NEW YORK, May 17—The United States must be prepared to convince Mexico that her intentions are friendly and should avoid all appearance of forcible intervention in Mexican affairs, it is asserted in a report entitled "The Mexican-American Oil and Land Controversy," just made public by the department of research and education of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

Declaring that the present Mexican-American situation involves problems of international relations on which the churches have clear convictions and on which they should be adequately informed, a foreword to the report says that the document is offered "as an aid to clear thinking upon these issues."

With reference to remedies under the report declares that the United States may, by diplomatic means, endeavor to persuade the Mexican Government to change its legislation to meet the American view regarding the rights of its nationals, but that "such a course of action would be based on considerations of policy, not of law."

"The immediate question before the National Conterence of Social Work. There is nothing discouraging in it to Miss Addams. "It is true that moral standards are changed and being changed," she said. "Standards of every sort are continually shifting. No condition is so dangerous as the lack of change. After discussing at length the "elements of controversy," the historical background of the situation with relation to the land and oil questions, and the points of international law involved, the report declares that Mexico's attitude and policy toward this country, are explained by a series of events covering nearly a century. "This series of events created a background against which Mexicans view what they regard as an aggressive policy on the part of the United States Government," it continues. "In particular, they fear increasing economic penetration of Mexico by American interests. These considerations make the present situation vastly more difficult.

The question of retroactivity of the Mexican Constitution of 1917 and of confiscation of American property in Mexico; the question of renunciation of the right to diplomatic protection; the question of conditional or unconditional recognition of the Mexican Government by the United States and the question of remedies under international law.

With regard to the first point, the report declares that final judgment must be suspended until the amparo (injunction) cases now before the Mexican Supreme Court are decided. With reference to renunciation of the right to diplomatic protection, it says that, for the present at least, the first point of the report showed.

SUMMER COURT PLAN SUCCEEDS

Docket Is Brought Nearly Up to Date; July Sessions Are Scheduled

The results of the summer sesions of the Superior Court in Suffolk County in 1926 were so satisfactory that the chief justice is proposing to install additional sessions in July and September, 1927. As a result of the 1926 summer sessions the special list with juries has been brought up to date.

On May 3, 1926, cases marked for the special list for October, 1925 had not been reached beyond those entered in June of that year. On May 2; 1927, all cases marked for the April, 1927, special list had been reached for trial. In other words, a progressive advance between these dates in the trial of special list cases had been made of 11 months, and the list brought up to date. B. & M. Asks M. & M. to Pay All Charges on Freight From Dock to Train

Introduction of many side issues relative to Boston & Maine Railroad operation charges, profits and customs were features of the testimony and cross examination at the continuation of the hearing today before terstate Comemrce Commission, on John McChord, examiner of the Inthe petition of the B. & M. to substitute truck delivery for harbor light-erage in the interchange of through freight at Mystic Wharf.

The case came before the I. C. C. because disagreement over methods of handling had caused the carriers to seek abolishment of the through rate, which meant greater expense to the shippers.

Proposer of Plan Mr. Hardy admitted that he was the father of the plan of substituting trucks for lighters as being more economical and quicker. He also admitted that he was treasurer of the Boaton & Maine Transportation Company, a subsidiary of the railroad which engages in trucking.

Mr. Cole sought to amend the complaint originally made by the Bosplaint originally made by the Boston & Maine today to provide for any other dock that the Marchants Miners might acquire, but objec-tion was raised by Mr. Brown and the attempted amendment was overhe saw no reason why they could not show the practicability of the Merchants & Miners securing an-

NORTH BENNET STREET SCHOOL SHOWS RESULTS

The varied achievements of the 160 activities carried on by the North Bennet Street Industrial School during the last year have been gathered together in an exhibition in the Rogers Building, 491 Boylston Street, which opened this afternoon and will continue through May 22, daily from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m.

Many processes taught at the school are shown in working exhibits, such as watch repairing, clay nibits, such as watch_repairing, clay modeling, wood carving, lighting fixtures, needlework, spinning and weaving. A special feature is the display of products of the lighting fixture industry. This work, done on a co-operative school basis by high schoolboys, is attracting widespread attention among educators, architects and decorators for tors, architects and decorators for its practical value in training boys, and for the excellence of the prod-

NATIONS AGREE TO ELIMINATE DOUBLE TAXES

Conventions Drafted in London to Protect Taxpayers From Injustice

Special from Monitor Bureau LONDON-Plans which it is be-lieved will protect taxpayers, both individuals and business concerns, from the present widespread evil of double taxation have been completed by an international committee of tax experts meeting in London. The United States was represented by Prof. Thomas S. Adams of Yale University tax additions to the Treesury. versity, tax adviser to the Treasury Department. The conference adopted four draft international conventions. two of which deal with double taxa-tion and two with means of combat-ing tax evasion. It was clear from the studies of the experts that the two questions are largely interde-pendent. Double taxation inflicts a grave hardship on commerce and may even prevent all commercial enterprise outside the home coun-try, while the sense of its injustice encourages and induces the evasion of-taxes. It was felt, however, that while equity demands that incomes should not be taxed twice, such pro-tection should not enable the income altogether to escape taxation.

Difficulty of Differentiation It was found that one of the chief ulties in the way of agreement lies in the different natures of taxes imposed in different countries. These taxes are broadly classified as per sonal and impersonal taxes. Typical

If the systems of various countries were more or less similar it would be possible to draw up mutually satisfactory agreements, but as, in most cases, the systems combine the two kinds of taxation referred to above, the problem becomes greatly complicated and it is hard to arrange one which is fair to both. Terminology proved that it is itself a leading difficulty and that insistence on the distinction between personal and improved the country various forms of assets are held to be situated. It seems that the definition that would find the greatest acceptance is that an asset should be regarded, for the purpose of inheritance taxes, as being situated in the place where the income derived from it would be subject to "impersonal" distinction between personal and im-personal taxes may be misleading.

Terms of Conventions The convention on double taxation in the sphere of direct taxes begins by defining the actual taxes which are to be regarded as personal or impersonal. In general the govern-ing rules may be said to be these: Income derived from real estate is taxed in the country where it is situated; income from bonds is taxed in the country where the payer of the income is situated, but non-resident foreigners can obtain a refund. Income from shares is taxed in the country where the center of management is situated. Income management is situated. Income trom commercial and industrial concerns is taxed wherever there is a would welcome it. This convention permanent establishment, but an exeption is made in the case of shipping, which can only be taxed where the center of management is situated Salaries and wages are taxed in the country in which the taxpayer is employed, except diplomatists: pensions are taxed in the country which pays the pensions, but annui-ties in the country of the payee.

"Personal" Taxes Regarding personal taxes the broad theory is that the taxpayer is charged in the country in which he has his fiscal domicile.

The convention dealing with inheritance taxes is much more tentative. The great difficulty is to determine in what country the tes-tator was domiciled, as different naions have widely differing views on his point. The broad theory adopted s that the country in which the tesinstances of the first are the American and British income taxes, in which a graduated tax, subject to wealth and family responsibilities, is levied. The second is the tax levied in some countries on such things as dividend coupons, without regard to the circumstances of the owner.

If the systems of various countries were more or less similar it would be possible to draw up mutually satisfactory agreements, but as, in another country various times between the testator was dwelling and intended to remain.

A not less serious difficulty is to determine in which country various forms of assets are held to be situated. It seems that the definition

vides for a very full interchange of information between the fiscal authorities of the different countries as to the property, income, and legal abatements of various persons. The last convention on tax evasion refers to what is called "mutual indicial assistance," and, as already described by cable, would involve an extraordinary extension of international law. It is believed that the United States and Great Britain would never agree to such a conver the courts of another country to col-lect taxes owed by a taxpayer in the former country. Applications for such assistance would have to pass between the highest fiscal authorities of the two states and the distrain or other measures for the recovery of the sum claimed would be carried out according to the laws of the enforcing country and not according to the laws of the country which is seeking to recover the money.

Important Innovation This clearly involves something approximating the extension of the law of extradition to the service of to which Anglo-Saxon nations would move with the greatest caution. In such countries as the so-called Suc-cession States of central Europe, lowever, there is a wide demand for it.

Many of the points covered by the conference have already been em-bodied in bi-lateral agreements be-tween various countries, mostly in Europe. The theories laid down in these model conventions can with little difficulty be embodied in the national laws of countries which prefer to proceed by altering their own legislation rather than by negotiat-ing a number of treatles.

Wets charge the drys with trying to control the convention and the drys counter with the assertion made by Wayne B. Wheeler of the Anti-Saloon League that "Bulletin tions enough for tenth of a pint! Prohibition Amendment gloats over the claim of controlling the American Medical Association's resolution against limiting whisky pre-scriptions. That is why they condemn our appeal for attendance at the health conference by health officers who are telling the truth about industrial alcohol."

In vain conservative physicians deprecate the discussion of prohibition. It will not down. An impetus national was given by the letter written by Clation Against the Prohibition action against liquor," according to Amendment a few days ago to the surgeon - general, charging Mr. Wheeler with trying to "stack" the W. C. T. U. convention of the American Medical the same time with physicians who were considered "right" on the liquor matter

One Kind of "Interference" Mr. Stayton deplored the "interference" with the medical and health associations. It was not charged that Mr. Wheeler was trycivil litigation and would be a step ing to obtain the attendance of anyone who was not entitled to attend the convention, only that he was urging those whose opinion in re-gard to liquor he believed to be right, to be present.

Promptly on the heels of state-ments for and against the prohibiconference have already been em- tion amendment, Charles Capehart, president and director of the Association Against Impure Liquor, Inc., composed largely of medical men who will attend the convention, issued a statement in which he said:

"Neither the wets nor drys should indertake to capitalize the influence of the great American Medical Association for selfish political gain. The American Medical Association is lished as a non-political, non-secta-rian, purely medical body adhering to ethical and scientific standards of the highest order.

Uncolored Facts of Economic Effect of Prohibition Basis of Feldman Report

of inquiry. The topics here deal with the more vital experience of industry resulting from the restriction of liquor, before prohibition

Have discharges for drunkenness decreased? Have there been fewer ployees absent after pay days? Has labor turnover due to drink illished? Has prohibition minimized the occurrence of industrial idents due to drink? Has prohibition had any observed effect on the tivity of the workers? The facts and observations of the outstanding industrial plants, made available through personnel directors and others on the firing line of industry, are summarized in half a dosen significant articles. A special article deals with the changes observed in the relations of salesmen to customers, as observed by seventy-five outstanding sales managers.

On these subjects reliance was placed not alone on these questionnaires from employers, but on the observations and experience of others in authority to advise. For example, to make sure of getting all the information possible about the relation of drunkenness to industrial idents, every workman's compensation commission or accident board in the country, federal or state, was communicated with, as well as several of the larger companies writing employers' liability insurance.

Testimony of 1000 Industrial Insurance Agents

The attempt to get an intimate picture of the way that prohibition was affecting the lives of the wage earners was singularly fortunate in obtaining the co-operation of three of the largest insurance companies writing industrial insurance policies. An investigation of prohibition has never before received such co-operation. One of the companies sent out a questionnaire to all the agents who had been in its employ since 1914, and obtained 520 replies, all of which became the

In the case of the other two companies, the information was obtained directly through the branch managers located all over the country, who in turn discussed the questionnaire at regular meetings of the agents, taking a viva voce vote on each question, or getting informa-tion through personal interviews with the agents. Anywhere from $0 to 1000 industrial insurance agents from all over the country participated in this part of the survey.

Present-Day Prosperity and Prohibition

What is the relation between prohibition and the increased purchasing power and widespread industrial prosperity? An attempt made to determine the extent to which prohibition may be credited with some of the economic results observed. Among factors studied were the changes in the consumption of certain comforts and luxuries, such as automobiles, radios, commercial recreation, and the Nke, and the rate of increase in thrift and insurance. As part of the consideration of thrift, a questionnaire was addressed to some of the leading savings institutions in the country.

Observed Economic Effects on the Welfare of Women and Children

Aside from the replies already mentioned of employers, insurance ngents, and others to a series of questionnaires, all of the officials in federal and state bureaus administering laws for the protection of women or children were consulted. Their observations and those of others are used as the basis for an article concerning the effects of prohibition on the economic conditions of women, children, and the

What of the Breweries, Brewery Workers and Bartenders! A questionnaire addressed to seventy-five of the leading brewers of the country, another questionnaire to about fifty of the locals of brewery workmen, and a similar investigation of the effects on the occupation of bartending, form the basis of two articles on these inter-

Real Estate Values, City Conventions and Hotel Prosperity

To determine what has been the effect of prohibition on hotel business, on the number of conventions astracted by representative cities and on real-estate values of streets he corners where as soon had been located, letters were written to hundreds of persons in touch with the facts. Interesting comparisons of conditions result from the infor-

Testimony of Mayors in Small Towns

It has been stated that the issue of prohibition is likely to be settled by the verdict of the small towns. With the co-operation of the American City, the chief municipal publication circulating among officials in such towns, a questionnaire was addressed to mayors in communities of from 10,000 to 40,000 population, in states that did not have prohibition before the Eighteenth Amendment. Replies were received from fifty mayors, and, in conjunction with the American City, the significant

Have Automobile Accidents Due to Intexication Increased or Decreased? Whether the known increase in motor accidents has been accompanied by an increase in the proportion of cases in which drunkenness was involved is a most pertinent inquiry. The information on this is meager, but the results obtained and embodied in one of the articles of the series should throw some light on this grave issue.

Crime and Prohibition

Crime has been included in this series because it is decidedly an economic problem, as well as a legal and social one. Whether crime has been increasing or decreasing, and the share which prohibition may have had in any change observed, is a man's-size problem which one of the articles in the series bravely, and it is hoped informingly, under

Perils of the Questionnaire Method of Collecting Facts

Anyone who makes a study of a contentious issue by means of questionnaires at once lays himself open to a threefold attack. It may be alleged that the people to whom the questionnaire was addressed were hand-picked for the purpose of bolstering a side. If this fails, it may be claimed that the letter sent, or the questionnaire itself, was framed in such a way as to stimulate answers favorable to a particular point of view. If the mailing list and the questionnaire are both all right. there is still left the opportunity to assert that the answers to the questionnaires were not impartially interpreted and the facts garbled to

An instance of such attacks in the field of prohibition survey is that leveled against a well-known industrial magazine which has been active in compiling statements from prominent persons as to the benefits of prohibition.

The writer has done everything possible to avoid any basis for criticism on the grounds mentioned. If we shall now go into detail to indicate by one example how the most important of the surveys was made—that of the experience of industrial firms—it is because in this era of prohibition propaganda such an explanation is indispensable in asking the reader's confidence.

How the List of Concerns Was Drawn Up

In preparing the list of companies to which the questionnaire was to be sent, the purpose was to include as many as possible which had established employment departments, since such concerns were most likely to have employment records. The best, and at the same time most representative, list available was that of the American Management Association, because it includes hundreds of employment supervisors and production managers.

To fill out the list with a larger representations from the middle West and far West, the writer sent letters to the secretaries of the chambers of commerce of the principal industrial cities, such as Detroit, St. Louis, Grand Rapids, Indianapolis, Cleveland, Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Los Angeles, San Francisco, etc., as well as Pitts-burgh, Buffalo, Syracuse, and others in the East, requesting them to give the writer a selected list of the largest and most representative

The list was further supplemented to some extent geographically by selections from the directory of the National Metal Trades Association, the Taylor Society, and in other ways. In the case of the railroads, about fifty with the largest mileage were selected. A list of coal mines was obtained from the associations of mine operators in the various districts, along with a hundred names suggested by Coal Mine Manage-

From the annual report of the American Electric Railway Associa tion, about seventy-five names were selected of street railway com-panies throughout the country. The writer made every effort to get a thoroughly representative list industrially and geographically, giving preference only to firms in cities formerly wet. Of the 1200 or more concerns addressed, the attitude of prohibition on the part of the company or of its principal officers was not given any consideration at all, and was known in only two instances.

About 90 per cent of the information comes from states having no state-wide restrictive legislation before national prohibition came into force. Concerns in New York, Massachusetts, Illinois, Pennsylvania, and Ohio account for well over half the replies, and a considerable number come from Missouri, Wisconsin, Michigan, Rhode Island, Con-necticut, and California, in the order named. The replies from states dry before national prohibition are comparatively few and scattered, but their experience has not been disregarded, since some dry states were so close to wet states that their pestrictions did not really matter.

The employees in the concerns returning questionnaires numbered more than 900,000, of which a little less than 80 per cent were male. Including the concerns visited by the writer personally, over 1,250,000 employees were on the pay roll of the concerns whose experience has been summarized.

The Letter and the Questionnaire

In order to eliminate all suggestion of the answer expected, and to get as unbiased a reply as possible, the letter and the questionnaire were most carefully constructed. The letterhead on which the letter Dartmouth College and the author's title. The letter and questionnaire were sent to a score of university professors in various departments of statistics, government and social sciences, asking for corrections and suggestions. As sent to the mailing list, the letter read as follows

> THE AMOS TUCK SCHOOL OF ADMINISTRATION AND FINANCE DARTMOUTH COLLEGE

October 16, 1926

I am making an impartial study of the economic and in-dustrial effects of prohibition, and am very anxious to get your unbiased observations in this field, irrespective of what your personal attitude may be toward the Highteenth Amendment. Your company may not have kept such records as those called for in the attached questionnaire, but your observation of conditions, nevertheless, will be of much value.

You will find it possible to answer the questionmaire in five minutes, if that is all that you can spare. On the other hand, if you are particularly interested in this subject or impressed, as many ask, with its great importance. I shall appreciate any information or advice you may be able to send me with regard to it. But please do not neglect to reply, as you are one of several executives upon whose observations we are depending. This is not merely a study I myself am making, but is also in behalf of two projected in vestigations by impartial authorities, whose plans at present are confidential.

The information collected from the various executives will be compiled and published in the press a few weeks hence, as the observations of leading industries in the country. You need not fear, however, that your name or that of your company will become public in case you wish it otherwise. If you put a little check mark in the appropriate place in the questionnaire, it will be kept in complete confidence.

Please let me hear from you.

Yours very sincerely, Herman Feldnis

The careful attention to the planning of the questionnaire brought its reward in numerous comments as to its impartial character. One happened to fall into the hands of Roger W. Babson who, unsolicited, wrote the author as follows: "Your questionnaire, in my opinion, covers the entire ground adequately and from angles which have not before been emphasized in the study of this subject. Too often such inquiries serve to conceal more information than they reveal, and if an effort is made to secure detailed information through such methods, the set of questions is generally too involved and intricate for the average person receiving it to bother with."

One of the difficulties eliminated was that of deciding definitely to what category of replies an answer belongs, since the person replying must check one of several statements which pin him down to a definite

Frank Replies Submitted by the Industrialists

A feature making for frankness was the promise to keep all information confidential if that was desired. We regret not being able to publish more names of concerns replying, but had we made this a condition, we should have had answers of quite a different tenor. Released inhibitions which publication of the firm's name would have involved, the replies were genuine in the information and opinions

There are some who may, however, feel dubious about any information obtained through questionnaires, on the ground that information about prohibition is bound to be no more than the expression of individual bias on the part of the person replying. We have taken this into account, in both the letter and the questionnaire, and tried to guard against it, Every question is followed by such limiting queries as: Can you supply statistics that will support your observations as given above?" While this has not solved the problem completely, all possible emphasis was put upon an objective point of view in framing the reply.

That such a point of view was in large measure induced by the precautions taken became more and more evident as the questionnaires were sent in. 'Many of the executives admitted their bias, and stated that they had made every effort to give facts, not their own prejudices. Aside from such self-conscious answers, the evidence of a desire to be impartial and objective is seen in the nature of the returns. Only a very small proportion voted a straight ticket; that is to say, few answered all questions uniformly, showing, therefore, that there was deliberation behind each reply and consideration of each issue on its merits. That this attitude was quite general, although not without exception, has been one of the most gratifying aspects of the returns.

Deep Interest of Employers in the Economic Effects of Prohibition It was also a pleasure to note the marked interest displayed, making it obvious that employers everywhere are eager to compare experience and get enlightenment on the economic and industrial aspects of prohibition. Of the 350 replies received, a large number apologized for not being able to supply information in greater detail. As instances of the many acts of co-operation, one concern asked for 25 questionnaires more, for distribution among the foremen; another had copies made, and sent them to all the branch managers and traveling representatives; a third writes that the personnel director had been assigned the function of making a thorough investigation, in conference with the works managers, superintendents and foremen.

A considerable proportion of the replies were of like tenor, so that the results represent the judgment of a good many officials in the con-cerns co-operating. In other cases, the individuals filling out the questionnaire took special care to mention their long period of service and their familiarity with employment conditions before prohibition, as survey, and the wide range of material obtained, one may be permitted to state that whatever be its merits or defects, it is the only investigation of its kind written since prohibition. Indeed, in comprehensiveness, it compares with the reports prepared on a similar subject in 1897 by the United States Commissioner of Labor. This, however, was at a disadvantage, because few industries at that time had the administrative machinery for keeping in touch with labor conditions as a whole; furthermore, the information obtained in that report was the result of written data alone, as against the observation of conditions first-hand which has been attempted in this study. Finally, the present investigation has the advantage of information based on a longer experience with pre-prohibition conditions and post-prohibition conditions than any as yet published.

What does this elaborate investigation show?

Has prohibition proved a desirable measure for the country from the economic and industrial standpoint, or a detriment?

What have been its chief advantages? What its chief disadvantages? We shall not attempt to answer the whole question until the concluding article of the series. In the meanwhile we shall take up each of the aspects mentioned, and try to arrive at some conclusion, with regard to them one at a time.

I ANDBAGS of leather strands woven or a hand loom are the very latest novelty in London. They made their appearance at the recent British industries Fair where they arosised a great deal of interest, and a consignment of them, with some other beautiful new goods, was shipped by an enterprising American buyer in time to appear on Fifth Avenue, liew York, the week after the fair cliesed.

This original teather fabric is seen in diagonal strip pes showing ombre effects in sunst colorings. A flat pouch bag with alternating stripes in madder-pink, and gray set in a beige-covered cliasp was lovely. So was a pochette in gold and mauve, the mauve strip eedged with a tiny jacquard patterin in red, which reproduced just the tones seen in the sky when the sun sinks into the west. colors softly blended. These are accompanied by kashs scarfs to match.

A delightful bag for the traveler is amusingly called the "sit-down" bag. Although supplied with fittings within, it folds up flat as a wallet to tack under the arm, but opens out square at the top to give easy access to a passport, purse, and other fittings. This is attractive in hide in beautiful colors, of which cherry and a lovely soft Neapolitan-blue are the most popular. It is stylish in black calf which is slightly more glossy than hide and which some of the bags in this new shape have the leather carried right over to hide the frame, giving a novel effect.

Quite 'new, also, is the way in which some of this season's pochettes are finished at the edge with a piping instead of the usual stitching. They are made in black coss-grained leather with a beige kid binding was very smart.

The alliance of black and color is pleasing in other recent models, notably a cyclamen hide pochette with corners of black alligator. Particularly smart was a similar thing

"Is Zat So?"

The amusingly written play of mixed society that Messrs. Gleason and Tabor provided for the amuse-ment of the theater-going public a season or so ago has come to the screen with George O'Brien and Ed-mund Lowe as chief protagonists. These two players assume the leading rôles with remarkable aptness It is a pity that the whole picture has not been kept to their level of excellence, but the conventional di-rections and the inept titles do much to make the whole affair tame and tasteless. The picture follows the form of the play, with a few in-troductory scenes added for good measure, but the crisp and crackling dialogue of the original, with the quick give and take of the various situations is quite missing. Laugh should follow laugh as the tale unfolds on the screen, and with two such clever players as Messrs. O'Brien and Lowe on hand it seems strange that such is not the case.

Douglas Fairbanks Jr. makes an agreeable figure as the rich young New Yorker who stumbles on this quaint pair of ring-siders and impounds them as family sown and rounds them are family sown and rounds them are family sown and rounds them are family sown and rounds the sown as family sown and rounds them are family sown and rounds them are family sown and rounds them are family sown and rounds the ounds them as family servants. Kathryn Perry, Cyril Chadwick, Doris Lloyd, Dione Ellis, Richard Maitland, Phillipe de Lacy, and Jack Herrick are the other players whom Fox Pictures has gathered together for "Is Zat So?" As the film stands, fresh in interpretation after many months of performance. "Above all, the music to the Gilit can hardly hope to duplicate the tremendous success of the play.

For a fine the atrical company to decide upon its opening bill in a foreign country requires much thought. In choosing "The Road to Happiness," Mr. Sierra no doubt felt that the Spanish atmosphere of that play made it the logical thing to open with, but the strength of the company has been discovered to America through the succeeding bills, rather than through the opening play.

In Shaw's "Pygmalion" we find the full flush of an accomplished company surrounding Senorita Barocena. It is the smoothest running film among the recent screen offerings, and while it offers little of originality in treatment or photography, "The Telephone Girl" commands the attention with a decided authority. A well-selected cast enacts this switchboard drama, with Holbrok Blinn as the political boss, Madge Bellamy as the telephone girl, and Warner Baxter, May Allison, Lawrence Gray and Halg-Hamilton in the other leading parts.

Mr. Blinn's distinguished stage presence is a decided asset here, and he makes the ruthless operator of the political machine a bellevable character. Miss Bellamy gives the most convincing screen performance of her career, playing simply thoughout and rising to the more dramatic episodes with real feeling. The others are all capable in their respective roles, with perhaps Mr. Gray's dependable agreeableness making the most impression. WHAT would Brantley York, who was in 1838 the first principal of the little school in Randolph County, North Carolina, say if he could compare his school with Duke University into which it has grown! The oak from the acorn seems in such a comparison a slow process, for between the planting of the school and the university is only 90 years. The little school grew, was incorporated as Union Institute Academy in 1841. The following year Braxton Craven became principal. the trustees of Normal College proposed to the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Episcopal ence of the Methodist Episcopal Church that it take ownership and control of the college. The conference prescribed conditions. Among these was that the trustees of the college raise $20,000. This was a heavy burden, but the conditions were met. Normal College, under the new corporate name, Trinity College, came in 1859 under control and ownership of the Methodist Church, where it has remained since that time, though during the Civil war college life was suspended. War college life was suspended. Recovery was slow. In 1889, "after mature and prayerful consideration," it was decided to move Trinity College from Randolph County to some prominent center in the State, provided an equally suitable site with buildings on it was guaranteed. Raleigh seemed to be about to become the home of the about to become the nome of the college when a proposition from the citizens of Durham led the trustees to locate there. In 1892 the first session was held in the new home.

Rapid Increase of Benefactions The benefactions of Washington Duke of Durham and other members of the family were immediate and continuous from the time when Trinity College moved to Durham, and under a new charter of 1903, which was then deemed optimistic as to future prosperity, the corporation was authorized to hold property "to a value not exceeding in the ag-gregate sum $3,000,000." Growth was so rapid that within 10 years this restrictive part of the act of incorporation was struck out by Act of the Assembly.

In 1887 the annual income had been about $9000 and by 1895 the total endowment had risen to $22,-500. Women had been admitted to all departments in 1897. In 1895 there were nine members on the faculty and 150 students. In 1900 the number of the faculty had increased to 23, and the student body was about 250. There are now nearly 10 times as many on the staff of the university, with over 2300 students. Professors' salaries from 1875 to 1885 were normally $1000 per year, but the amount actually paid to them ranged from $231.38 to $572.30, so that the professors during these years made an average annual contribution of over 50 per cent of their salaries to the upkeep of Trinity. ENJOY The World's Best Vacation Land!

Here is the vacation for you this summer! Take your choice of mountain stream, lake or salt water fishing. Big gamy salmon and trout in abundance. If you don't fill your creel it's your fault; but there is solace in the scenery. With Seattle as your fault; but there is solace in the scenery.

With Seattle as your headquarters see glorious Mt. Rainier and Mt. Baker; the Monte Cristo alpine district; Olympic Peninsula wonderland; cruise through San Juan archipelago to spots of "Old England"—Victoria and Vancouver; bathe in the Pacific's surf and coast down a live glacier the same day; golf on cool, evergreen courses; motor through world famous forests.

New experiences, new sights, new cities—like Seattle with 400,000 grown from a pioneer settlement in one generation.

Summer's cool-Average July temperature 62 degrees To make your vacation complete take the PACIFIC COAST EMPIRE TOUR—Washington, Oregon, California—"the Irip of a lifetime, remembered a lifetime." See all the Pacific Coast by including Spokane, Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, Oakland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego. Ask about side trips to Alaska and Hawaii.

Round Trip summer excursion fare, Boston to Seattle and Pacific Northwest $145.40; via Washington, Oregon, California only $163.40 Start planning now. Writ today for free illustrated booklet "Seattle and The Charmed Land." It tells of a remarkable vacation land and describes Seattle and the Pacific Northwest. #### SENTIMENT OF TRADERS IS BULLISH

Lasy Credit Conditions Are Incentive for Moving Prices Upward

NEW YORK, May 17 (P)—Operators for the rise regained control of the p ice movement at the opening of toin y's stock market, but they continued to encounter strong opposition, pardicularly among the oil shares.

Initial gains of a point or two were recorded by Baidwin, Union Bag & aper, Federal Mining & Smelting preformed, Houston Oil, United States Cast iron Pipe and Worthington Pump.

Bullish sentiment was created by the unexpected decrease in brokers iron Pipe and Worthington Pump.

Bullish sentiment was created by the unexpected decrease in brokers iron Pipe and Worthington Pump.

Bullish sentiment was created by the unexpected decrease in brokers iron Pipe and worthington Pump.

Bullish sentiment was created by the rapported by the Federal Reserve ank, the first drop since March 23, and by the arrival of another shipment is $8,000,000 in gold.

Speculative interest centered at first the railroad shares. Reading and Colorado & Southern were elevated to tow peak prices. Nickel Plate, Chesanake & Ohio and Wsetern Maryland unickly extended their early gains to 3 points or so.

National Lead recorded a substantial devance despite the decrease in lead rices reported yesterday. Pipe shares were in good demand as a result of necessed pipe line construction activity in the oil fields.

Weathers Selling Orders

Weathers Selling Orders There were a few soft sports, among the most conspicuous being Inter-orough Rapid Transit, which sagged more than a point to a new low level

Foreign exchanges opened slightly casier, with demand sterling quotel around $4.85 3-16, and French francs just above 3.91 cents.

The list weathered a stream of selleting orders which forced Ludlum Steel points under yesterday's final figure, and toppled Chesapeake & Ohio from 184 te 181.

and toppied Chesapeake & Ohio from 184 to 181.

Renewed accumulation on a large scale of the railroad equipments, in consequence of the expanding volume of orders being distributed by the leading railroad systems, and a buillst demonstration in Mack Trucks, were effective in heading the market strongly upward again toward midday. The renewal rate for call loans was unchanged at 4½ per cent.

Bond Movement Narrow

Bond Movement Narrow

Trading in bonds continued in a quiet manner, with prices showing no definite trend. Lacking any animated buying or selling, changes in all divibuying or selling, changes in all divisions were extremely narrow.
Chicago & Alton certificate 3s gained fractionally on moderate demand, and there was some accumulation of Missouri Pacific first 6s at steady prices. The buying of Chesapeake Corporation is appeared to have run its course, although the price still held around 96.
Second Liberty 4½s were dealt in to a fairly large extent, but other Government issues were quiet. Little attention was paid to the foreign group.

LONDON STOCK MARKET HEAVY

LONDON, May 17—The stock market was heavy today, trading being small. Reports of a renewal of fighting in China has kept the public out of market and caused some selling.

of market and caused some selling.

Mines were weak on liquidation of stale bull accounts. Industrials and textiles were easier. Oils were dull. Home rails were heavy. Rubber shares did not respond to the decline in stocks of the staple. Royal Dutch was 31, Rio Tinto was 39 11-16 and Courtaulds 63-16.

The glit-edge division was fairly firm, sentiment being favorably influenced by Monday's gold influx with its prospects of cheaper money rates.

Foreign issues were unsettled, marked declines being recorded in German and French securities, much of this selling being based on the recent slump on German bourse.

GOOD RALLY IN WHEAT AND CORN

CHICAGO, May 17 (49)—Wheat and corn rallied quickly today from initial downturns. Buying of wheat was associated with reports that Knsas as a whole is likely to raise less wheat than last year.

last year.

Opening % to %c off wheat later hovered around yesterday's finish. Corn paralleled the action of wheat, starting % to %c down, and after a little additional sag recovering about in full. Oats were draggy. Provisions inclined downward.

Opening prices today were:

Wheat—May 1.39%; July 1.34%@%; ept. 1.31%@%. Corn—May 87?@%; July 87%@%; Sept. 49%%. Oats—May 48; July 48%@49%; Sept. 45%@%.

PHILADELPHIA BONDS AWARDED PHILADELPHIA. May 17—Prices at which the Philadelphia City loan was awarded were as follows, all of which were on 4 per cent coupon rate: Sinking Fund Commission 36,000,000 at 102-101; Board of City Trusts $4,000,000 at 104.33; Liberty National Bank of New York and Daniel & Co. $500,000 at 100.277; First National Bank of New York and associates on bid for all or any, part $500,000 at 100.09. Total premium realized by the city was $169,295.

NEW YORK, May 17 (AP)—Importa-tions of crude rubber into the United States in April increased to 48,673 tons from 32,678 in April, 1925, the Rubber Association of America reports. The total for the first four months this year was 157,312 tons.

COTTON GOODS PRICES UP ON HEAVY DEMAND

Double Shift Operations Necessary—Unfilled Orders Gain-Osnaburgs Active

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., May 17 Special)—Primary cotton goods mar-ets began during the last week to reflect in the price levels prevailing, the extraordinary volume of buying that has been taking place during the last few weeks.

Quotations advanced an eighth to

Quotations advanced an eighth to a quarter of a cent a yard above the levels of a week ago, and these in turn were slightly above the levels of the previous week.

Cotton has advanced four cents a pound since early in December. In that time the buying of gray goods has been so tremendous, that stocks of goods on hand were almost wholly cleaned up, and the mills were compelled to start double-shift operations to keep up with the current deliveries; on top of that, the mills have piled up a staggering total of unfilled orders sufficient to cover virtually two months' production at the present high rate.

covers only a fraction of the rise in cotton prices.

Prix idea of Co-operation

The situation is so unusual that at the joint convention of cotton manufacturers held last week in Atjantic City, special steps were taken to inaugurate a sange competitive attitude and more co-operation among the various mill men, and serious warsings were issued of the fatal results of selling at or below cost of production. It is elaimed that the cotton manufacturing industry has already lost the benefit which it should have had as a result of the very low price of cotton, the universally depleted stocks of cotton goods, and the large buying that has been done during the last four months.

The week has seen some slackening

Big Demand for Narrow Goods
Occasional spot sales of 38½-inch, 60x48s were made at 6½c, with forward goods quoted at 6½c. The 2.20yard goods were priced just under 5c for spots for long cuts, and were hard to get at that figure, though double cuts for forward delivery were picked up at 4½c.

There was especially heavy pressure for narrow goods, and printers were finding difficulty in getting sufficient yardage for early delivery. The 25inch 11.00-yard, 52x44s, were in strong demand at 3½c, while 12-yard 48-50s sold in a substantial way at 3½c.

Thirty-inch drills were also moving in some volume, and there has been good business placed in ducks which have been advanced a half cent, and in 30-inch osnaburgs. In fact the latter type of goods, though being turned out at the rate of 1,191,000 yards a week, have hardly a half a week's production on hand, and there are unfilled orders on mill books covering no less than 10.766,000 yards, or virtually two months' production.

There was an advance from 18c to 18½c made in 8-ounce tickings, and the new price is still called wery reasonable. Denims are closely sold up, and there has been an active busi-ness put through on the finer and medium weight ginghams. The ging-ham situation, however, has been anotty.

ham situation, however, has been spotty.

Fine Goods Prices Strong

The fine goods section of the gray goods market has seen a continuation of strong buying. Prices have been advanced somewhat in reflection of the rapid climb of extra staple cotton that is used in their production.

New Bedford fine goods mills have sold lawns and poplins in a large way for deliveries covering the next three months. Fine twills and pongees have also been bought in quantity, and considerable business has been put through in voiles.

Broadcloths have been in demand, especially the cheaper carded constructions, but neither the fine broadcloths nor the carded variety have been available in the wanted deliveries. During the last week there was an increased volume of fancies bought, both for shirting and for dress goods purposes, we well as for other uses, such as draperies.

Silk and cotton mixtures have been moving in some volume at slightly higher prices, and there has been the usual large number of inquiries for cotton and rayon mixtures, though the scramble for rayon alpacas seems to have slackened somewhat.

scramble for rayon alpacas seems to have slackened somewhat.

Mills are operating at peak capacity in the weaving departments, and a recent improvement in the fine yarn markets has made it possible also to start up much additional equipment in the sale yarn mills.

HARVARD SERVICE FORECASTS NORMAL TRADE CONDITIONS

Harvard Economic Service says in its current bulletin:

There is nothing new in prospect, sither in the conditions which govern credit or in those operating directly within business itself, to change materially the outlook for business during the entire year. Industry and trade are being carried on conservatively and money conditions remain easy.

Even ahould both building and crop conditions prove favorable it is improbable that business during the autumn will rise very greatly above the levels of recent months.

The full effects of the adverse insuences recently appearing—as for example the unsettlement of certain world markets by the Japanese crisis and the curtailed volume of buying loods—are yet to be felt; and these affuences, unless offset by new developments of a favorable nature, will keep the volume of business below that of the second half of last year, and perhaps below that of the present that the second that the present and the second half of last year, and perhaps below that of the present and the second half of last year.

with the Courage of its Convictions Today you can have positive guidance on your investments—courageous advice, based on successful experience with hundreds of subscribing members -specific advice that does more than merely outline the status of the market but tells you if need be by wire or phone just when and what securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange to buy or sell profitably.

Take for example the purchase of bonds. There is more to be considered than merely ample value and an earning. power which assures the protection of the principal invested. The policy of this service of financial counsel sanctions the purchase of bonds when they point to an adequate yield over and above the present value of money.

Take preferred and common stocks. They must do more than pay healthy dividends. They should be purchased at less than the actual value which continuous favorable business outlook establishes, and retained until prices are more in line with their actual worth.

Fundamentally safety of principal, max-imum income and profits depend upon the intelligence of the advice given and upon the speed and directness with

An Investment Advisory Service for Individual Requirements

Operating Since 1920

If you are an investor, or active in the market, or may desire to enter it with the strong counsel of such a constantly vigilant service, here is your oppor-tunity. Full information will be gladly sent if you will write for it or call at one of our offices.

To enable you in some measure to gage the value of our advice, we will, for five dollars, tell you quickly and accurately our opinion of three of your present holdings that you are most concerned about. Just write the names of these stocks or bonds, (must be listed on the New York Stock Exchange) on the coupon below. Be sure to fill in your name and address plainly. This coupon will be returned promptly to you checked in the proper column in accordance with our findings. If action is needed quickly, we will wire. Put us to the test now.

Princeton on Carnegie Lake Course

TTHACA, N. Y. (Special Correspondence) — The first test of James Wray's new coaching regime in Corpell twoing will come next Saturday, when the Red and Wfitte will enter three eights in the annual triangular regatta with Yale and Princeton. This year the races will be rowed on Carnegie Lake at Princeton. This year the races will be rowed on Carnegie Lake at Princeton. This year the races will show definite progress in their attempt to regain Cornell's old position among the rowing elect, they do not look for miracles. If the Cornell varsity eight gives a good account of itself at Princeton, and proves that it has learned a definite system of rowing and knows what it is about, the supporters of the Red and White will be satisfied. For there is a general realization that it would be unfair to expect too much from Wray. In a few months of coaching, especially in view of the fact that for the last two years the crew-situation has been unsettled.

Wray has good material, though it lacks successful racing experience, a determining factor, as Cornellinas see it. He has had loyal go-operation, discipline has been restored, and morale is good. Hence the Ithacans look for a good showing in the Yale-princeton race, but they realize also that Yale has another set of powerful rowing this year.

Wray, with the Pough-keepsie four-mile race in view has keepsie four-mile race in view has given the carsmen as much as they can stand, but he has not neglected preparation for the two mile races, one gets the impression that his varsity eight, a big, powerful crew, will do rather better at four miles than it will at two, but it is not so inflexible as not to be able to adapt its rowing to the requirements of the shorter race. run the pace up to 40 and keep it there.

Wray has placed only three members of last year's varsity eight in the first crew this year: Commodore F. A. C. Drew '27 at No. 2, P. D. Harwood '28 at No. 5, and S. C. Allen '27 at No. 6. H. C. Boschen '28, who was in the varsity last year, is rowing 6 in the junior varsity. Several old Jayvee men, and a number of men with experience in freshman eights, and some new oarsmen fill the other places in the two main crews.

The varsity eight averages 177 pounds, 6ft. 2in. in height, and its average age is 21 years and 5 months. The junior eight is almost as heavy, weighing 176 pounds. The freshman crew has not developed as rapidly as the others and may still be considered in the experimental stages. Not much is looked for from it in the first two races, but it ought to be a good crew by the time it reaches Poughkeepsie.

Varsity Has Greater Power

Varsity Has Greater Power Varsity Has Greater Power

In numerous trial races the varsity has beaten the junior varsity consistently. The crews have been pretty even in the first mile but in the second the varsity, with greater power, has drawn from one to four lengths ahead. This eight is stroked by J. M. Francis of Troy N. Y., whose grandfather, Charles M. Francis, was a champion single sculler in his undergraduate days at Cornell and whose father, John M. Francis, rowed in the varsity shell at Ithaca, rowed in the varsity shell at Ithaca in 1902. Young Francis is a big, powerful chap, with the true racing instinct.

The probable makeup of the three Cornell eights for the Princeton regatta follows:

GEHRIG HITS EIGHTH HOME RUN

DETROIT, May 17—New York maintined its place three full games ahead of Chicago in the lead of the league by defeating Detroit in their first encounter of the season, here, yesterday, 6 to 2. Gehrig's hitting was mainly responsible for the victory. He hit two doubles and a home run, tying his clubmate, Ruth, for home-run honors in the majors with eight. In the third inning, Meusel singled and stole second, third and home to the the Tigers with two runs aplece. George S. Smith, Detroit's new pitcher from Toronto, and J. H. Walkup, who won 22 and lost 11 with Fort Worth last year, finished the game for Detroit after Holloway had gone seven innings and both did quite well. B. W. Deviveiros, who took a leading part with Beaumont in setting up a minor league record for double plays by a club in one season, got into the game at shortstop for the Tigers but did not get a chance in the field or at bat. Fotheryill, Manush and Hellmann, Detroit's outfielders, each made two hits. The score:

referee might have, under the old sys-tem, toward the coach who obtained his appointment. Institutions com-mitted to the plan are West Point.

With the 1927 game, on some gridlerons at least, shorn of its scouting feature and under supervision of the dictator, this year's brand of football promises to present a markedly altered aspect. The transformation will be heightened by new rules which, among other things, move the goal posts 10 yards back of the playing field, curb the shift and encourage the lateral and backward pass.

Some proposals designed to curb alleged over-emphasis of the game, have been rejected, however. The Dartmouth College Athletic Council rejected the proposals of the institutions's president, Ernest M. Hopkins for substitution of undergraduate coaches for paid mentors; reserved decision or his plan for limitation of play to sophomores and juniors, and endorsed developing of two major teams at each college to play reciprocal "home-and-home" games.

Philip Finlay of Philips-Exeter Academy shot the low medal score yesterday in the 36-hole qualifying round of the eastern interscholastic golf championship. His scores were 70 and 75 for a total of 145, three strokes better than that made last year by Eugene Homans, metropolitan champion of Choate School. Garvis Hicks of St. John's Manlius School, runnerup last year, failed to qualify.

In the team matches, four men, 36 holes, Choate School won with a score of 652: second. Lawrenceville, 654; third, Exeter, 657; fourth, Hill School, 660; fifth, Hotchkiss, 671; sixth, Tomes, 680.

YOUNG HOLDER

Marked Impetus in Canadian Swimming During the Past Year

MONTREAL, P. Q. (Special Correspondence)—Swimming in Canada and especially the eastern section of the Dominion has received a great impetus during the last year and especially since George Young, the young Toronto star who holds more Canadian records than any other swimmer, won the San Pedro Channel swim. Young holds nine records in all. George Vernot, former McGill University star, comes next with five.

not, former McGill University star, comes next with five.

Swimmers of this city and Toronto are holding most of the Canadian amateur records. Thirteen men's records are held by swimmers from each of these cities. Only two are held by western Canadian swimmers, both for outdoor swimming. Charles Hill of Vancouver is the holder of the 200-yard breast-stroke record of 3m. 16 2-5s., while Victoria holds the fourman 200-yard relay record of 1m. 55 1-5s.

Walter Laufer of Chicago is the only that of 5m. 7s., for the 440-yard free-style indoors.

Montreal and Toronto have not been as successful in the women's swim-ming events. Out-of 15 recognized records, Montreal does not hold a single one while Toronto holds only five. Western Canada has done better in this division with Winnipes holding three and Victoria one. Five women's records are held by United States swimmers with Philadelphia claiming two of them. Miss Agnes Geraghty is the double holder with 3m. 27s. for the 220-yard breast-stroke indoors and 3m. 12 2-5s. for the 200-yard breast-stroke outdoors.

It is to be noted that women have not advanced as much in swimming as have the men and there are a number of distances which do not have any recognized records. The last two or three years have, however, noted a big improvement in women's swimming and it is expected that in a few more years the Dominion will hold more of its own marks in this field. Press of the World A Bit of Far North

New Orleans Times-Pleayune: All the world's wonders are not yet listed and included in the tourist offerings. The largest single chunk of wilderness still remaining, namely, Siberia northward from the trade route to the Far East, still has infinite possibilities. It is pretty well recognized that wast gold fields exist there somewhere, there are forests to supply the world for centuries, and the latest news is about oil. It is reported that the American Research Foundation has received word that natives out of the wilds have described a large lake seen by them in the Far North that is filled not with water but by a strange black fluid detailed descriptions of which seems to show conclusively that the stuff is petroleum. There's the asphaltum lake of Trinidad, and asphaltum is really nothing else than a very thick solidified oil. So really the wonder is that no open oil pools have been discovered in other parts of the world. Maybe Siberia really has such a phenomenon. A BIT OF FAR NORTH

MASSACHUSETTS BAY CELEBRATION

Salem (Mass.) Mews: The committee on the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the Massachusetts Bay settlement in 1630 have insued bulietins offering suggestions. They do not propose to divert this affair into a commercial advertising scheme which would be appropriate at some different time but does not fit into this idea. They lay emphasis on the cultural side and on reproductions of old-time life, and attention to the intellectual and civic contributions that Massachusetts has made to the nation. This is fine, and active efforts should begin to prepare a celebration along these lines. The time has gone by for big commercial expositions in hönor of such events, but the people like to have the romance and the pioneering spirit and the significance of the colonial achievement brought out.

The Economic Effects of Prohibition

THE survey of the economic results of the prohibition policy in the United States, publication of which begins in The Christian Science Monitor today, is perhaps the most important journalistic contribution to the discussion of prohibition which has been made since the enactment of the Volstead Law. So far as is humanly possible, this survey has been conducted without prejudice concerning the main issue. The director of the survey, Prof. Herman Feldman, of the Amos Tuck School of Administration and Finance at Dartmouth College, is a statistician of the highest attainments, and long experience. Whether his personal predilection is in favor of or opposed to the prohibition policy The Christian Science Monitor did not know when it engaged him to undertake this work, nor does it know now. He has prosecuted it from the standpoint of purely unbiased inquiry, and has set down facts, leaving his readers to draw their own deductions and conclusions.

An inquiry of this nature is a notable undertaking. In pursuing it Professor Feldman has taken a cross section of the economic and industrial life of the United States and has conducted his researches therein with such thoroughness and such transparent good faith as to compel respect for his findings. He him-self, in the first installment of his series of articles, has explained the methods by which the inquiry has been prosecuted. We trust that all who are interested in the subject will read this first article with especial care, as only by a thorough knowledge of the facts set out therein can Monitor readers understand how great is the measure of confidence which may be placed in the findings set forth in subsequent Professor Feldman at no time during his inquiry has been embarrassed or influenced by suggestions from the Editorial Board of The Christian Science Monitor. He was commissioned to make the inquiry in his own way, and to announce his own findings. Before he embarked upon the undertaking the Monitor gave him assurance that whatever the tenor of his findings might be, whether favorable or unfavorable to the prohibition policy, they would be printed as set forth by him. In some of his articles prohibitionists will perhaps have their eyes opened to unexpected weaknesses in the law, or to unrecognized economic injuries which it has caused. These facts will find as prominent place in the series of articles as will those which most fully uphold the contention of the Monitor that economically the prohibition policy and the Volstead Act have been most important contributors to the enduring and the amazing industrial progress and prosperity of the United States.

Grading Latin-American Produce

THROUGH efficient grading of raw materials and by rigidly adhering to those grades once established, American producers have won for themselves markets throughout the world. A brief message on a cable, representing a shipping document bearing the assurance of a recognized warehouse or other reputable agency, is accepted as adequate guarantee that the shipment will measure up to specifications. And it has been claimed by many that by means of the efficient grading of products and the strict observance of the grades adopted, American growers have been able to command a better price. This is a natural result, for through these methods of trading the element of uncertainty is largely minimized, and purchasers are not put to the expense of establishing duplicate means of checking and measuring that which they have bought.

What has been accomplished for the products of North America by such means can conceivably be accomplished for the raw products of South America. It was with that idea in thought that the Pan-American Conference on Standardization was convened early in May. This conference took up in detail the many products which are peculiarly the growth of the Latin-American countries, such as wool, hides, cocos, fruits, etc., many of which are already purchased in large quantities by persons in the United States. But it is a significant fact that the methods usually followed in purchasing such raw materials in South America are decidedly different from the methods followed by foreign buyers of produce from the United States. American firms have not infrequently found it necessary to maintain their own personal agents in the South American markets

Such a system has not added any too much to the convenience of those who have found it necessary to maintain agents throughout South America, and it would certainly seem evident that the system has not materially enhanced the value of those products in the eyes of the foreign purchaser. That is a lesson which has by this time been thoroughly learned by the Latin-American business men, and in the best interests of all concerned the proper grading and standardization of all these products are sought. Grading will go far toward eliminating misunderstandings between sellers and buyers, and honest inspection and certification will give that further guarantee which is so much to be desired in all channels of international trade. Upon such agreements as these does the good will of the peoples of the world rest.

Automobiles and Shoe Leather

TORE or less depression in the shoe industry, experienced throughout various centers in the United States since the close of the World War, has been assigned in a measure to the increasing use of automobiles and the proportionately decreasing use of sole

Men and women are moving about on wheels rather than on heels. Steps are taken only in such places as do not furnish the necessary conditions or area for the operation and move ment of motorcars. People must still walk into and about buildings and perhaps take the few steps required to reach the nearest port with a white band.

With rubber largely taking the place of shoe leather in the new order of things a readjust-ment process is inevitable. As a result the shoe industry of the country will doubtless find its balance and soon be well on the way to those stable conditions which generally obtained a decade or more ago.

Shoes must continue to be worn even though they may be worn longer. Manufacturers are studying conditions and meeting them. In the case of women's shoes a greater effort is being made to cater to fluctuating tastes and a desire for new and attractive designs.

Incidentally shoe manufacturers of the United States are beginning to realize that there are other than home markets for their products and a substantial overseas trade is in the process of development. The United States Department of Commerce has been instrumental in bringing this about.

In the transitory period there has been some shifting of the centers of production and a great many plants have dropped out of existence, but these movements are a natural economic result of the gravitation from the inflated levels of war-time production.

On the whole there appears to be no reason for the shoe industry to be in the least alarmed. The shifting of centers of production is a logical result of the movement westward of larger populations and the removal of the seat of raw materials to a more distant point.

Restricting the Output of Oil

EXCEPT as it is found possible to justify the proposed restriction of production in the petroleum fields of the United States as a method or means of nation-wide conservation, it is doubtful if the action taken in the Oklahoma fields, apparently with the tacit approval of the Secretary of the Interior, will be sanctioned by the public generally, or by those charged with the responsibility of enforcing federal antitrust laws. While it has been known for some time that retail prices of gasoline have declined somewhat, due to the existence of large surplus supplies of both crude and refined oils, the consumers were inclined to regard the matter complacently, realizing that they have repeatedly been required to pay prices amounting almost to a premium at times when available stocks were declared to be abnormally low. The buyers, at such times, have had no recourse. In many instances they have appealed to state boards and other supervisory agencies in vain, and have waited, with what patience they might possess, for the adjustments which usually follow.

But now, with the development of an unusually prolific field in the Seminole district of Oklahoma, adding some 350,000 barrels a day to the already large supplies in storage, powerful influences among producers have effected what is referred to as a dictatorship in the Oklahoma sector, the object being to place an artificial or arbitrary restriction upon output, at least for a period of a few weeks. There is reason to suspect that if the federal officials charged with the duty of enforcing the antitrust laws can be induced to countenance this mehod of regulating production in a basic industry, the method now being applied in Oklahoma will be adapted to meet similar conditions elsewhere. Just what the result of that process will be can be forecast by reference to previous experiences where monopolistic, control has been uninter-

Independent oil producers and so-called "wildcatters" in the petroleum fields do not look complacently upon what they declare to be an effort of the larger oil concerns to control the flow of wells and, incidentally, the price of petroleum products. It is the "wildcat" developer who has made it difficult for the large companies to monopolize the petroleum producing and distributing industry. Whereas it was made to appear, not so long ago, that the available supply of crude oil was steadily de-creasing, and that eventually it would be necessary to advance prices all along the line, it now is claimed that new sources have rendered the business of all producers unstable.

It will be interesting to observe the efforts of those seeking to fortify the methods which are designed to control the petroleum industry by purely economic means in endeavoring 'to obtain sanction for their plan to curtail production of a natural product as essential as coal, or iron, or salt, thereby assuring to themselves a larger profit than they can hope to receive if production is unlimited. It has not yet been made apparent that the solicitude expressed by those seeking to apply this method is for the welfare of the public.

The King's Deputy in Canada

NE of the first duties of the Governor-General of Canada is to make himself well acquainted with the Canadian people, in as many parts of the Dominion as he can conveniently visit. The new Governor-General, Lord Willingdon, has lately returned to Government House in Ottawa from a successful tour of western Canada, as far as the Pacific coast. With national celebrations coming on, for the diamond jubilee of Canadian confederation, including prospective visits of the Prince of Wales and the British Prime Minister, Stanley Baldwin, His Excellency may find it necessary to wait for another summer before touring the Maritime Provinces.

Under the changing order of constitutional relations between Canada and Great Britain. which are tending to strengthen rather than weaken the ties between motherland and daughter nation, the Governor-General will probably have more time to devote himself to the high calling of King's deputy in Canada. In early colonial times, governors of Canada sometimes exercised the privilege of taking part in Canadian politics. Long ago, however, that practice lapsed into disuse. But the Governor-General continued to act as the representative of the Government of Great Britain, as well as the King's personal understudy or Viceroy. At the last imperial conference, the assembled statesmen from the British community of nations agreed that henceforth the Governor-General of any British dominion should be a representative only of the British Crown, and not a representative of His Majesty's Government in Great Britain or of any department of that Government. Communications between the Government of Canada and the Government of Great Britain formerly passed through the Governor-General's office to the office of the Colonial Secretary in London. Communications are now made direct through the Department of External Affairs in Ottawa to the responsible authorities in London.

The readjustment of constitutional machinery is still incomplete, as the Government of Great Britain is now without any plenary representative in Canada. It will apparently become necessary soon to establish a British envoy in Ottawa something like the office of the Canadian High Commissioner in London. The necessity of this new appointment may become more obvious after the United States Minister to Canada is established in Ottawa. British interests in Canada call for at least as much direct attention as the United States is giving by appointing one of the ablest members of the American diplomatic corps, William Phillips, to be the first Minister to Canada. In the meanwhile, the evolution of the Governor-General's position is proceeding harmoniously as the representative of the British Crown, or the King's deputy

Mankind and Its Games

Many people in the United States who not long ago were devoting much of their spare time and surplus intellectual energy to the crossword puzzle are now equally busy asking themselves and each other questions, not so much for information as to find out how much or how little information is possessed already. So widespread is this activity that it has attracted the attention of grave students of human behavior, several of whom have been lately interviewed and have suggested various explanations.

The opinions of these latter are interesting, but on the whole rather disappointing. From almost every point of view, it appears, this process of contemplating a series of questions, taken from the wide sphere of history and human endeavor, and answering as many as possible "will not harm anybody nor do any-body much good." There is no doubt an erroneous belief current that the individual poring over a question book-now happy, for example, in knowing at once what important event happened in 1492, and now discouraged by his doubt as to who wrote "The Thebaid," and what it was all about—is advancing intellectually by leaps and bounds. One may argue indeed that, in thus studying countless questions, the individual is expressing his "empathy," a recent word coined to define the ancient pleasure that is derived from thinking one is like somebody else. But this leaves you smiling and just where you were before.

One savant has stated, in commenting on this "Ask me another" fad: "The questionnaire craze is founded upon the desire for knowledge, the desire to show off and the satisfaction that comes of a certain superiority to the other fellow. It is a mental exercise of a sort. I should say it is of a slightly higher grade than the crossword puzzle.'

This is encouraging so far as it goes but it doesn't go very far. It is possible also to discover in the popularity of these questions and answers a rather pathetic urge of mankind to find an intellectual employment in what is essentially a "machine age." Nor should one overlook, in seeking to explain the popularity of this latest system of gymnastics, the need and determination of civilized man to find in intellectual exercise a peaceful substitute for the excitement that primitive man found in cruder physical exercise.

Anyway, as the children might say, "It is a great game." And mankind seems to need games. The student of history could provide quite a list of them that adult children have made up for their own amusement all down the ages. Or that somebody has made up for them, and that have caught on.

Editorial Notes

How strange is the unthinking state of affairs to which Dr. Frank B. Jewett, president of the Bell Laboratories where television was produced, referred at the annual meeting of the National Academy of Science, when he said that space shrinks, time vanishes, and the public goes on almost unheeding. In the last twenty-four months, he explained, three revolutionary improvements in world communication have come: cable lines have been constructed of a new alloy enabling them to carry six or seven times the present traffic; pictures may be flashed over telegraphs and cables, and Anglo-American telephony has arrived. What the future, and the not distant future, holds for humanity, it were rash to forecast, but one statement made by Dr. Jewett, in connection with the establishment of the last mentioned wonder, gives much food for thought. Any time in the last ten years, he said, it was possible but not practical to talk from one country to the other. The difficulties, however, were not all physical. A proper personnel had to be trained at either end of the wire!

Established a little more than ninety years ago, Emory University, in Atlanta, Ga., has become one of the most noted southern educational institutions. In view, therefore, of the demands being constantly made upon it and to make possible future growth, the board of trustess, in adopting a $10,000,000 expansion program, calling for the provision of $3,500,000 in new buildings and $6,500,000 in additional endowment by 1936, the one hundredth anniversary of its founding, have taken a far-sighted and wise course. One can but recognize the force of the foreword by Calvin Coolidge of a booklet put but by the board in question, in which he says in part:

Universities . . . are more alive than the market Universities . . . are more alive than the market place; their eyes are not only on the present, but on the past and the future. And the life within their walls is always young and acquisitive, To place your name, by gift or bequest, in the keeping of an active university is to be sure that the name and the project with which it is associated will continue down the centuries to quicken the minds and hearts of youth, and thus make a permanent contribution to the welfare of humanity.

To Spain and the World's Side

MONORROW morning at seven o'clock if it pleases the Portuguese railway I shall be in Spain, in the city of Badajoz. From Badajoz I shall walk northward through Caceres, Plascencia, Bejar, Salamanca and Zamora—in fact, I shall encircle Portugal and arrive in Vigo. The distance is three or four hundred miles. At Vigo the Spanish steamship agent—known to ironical English sailors as the "King of Vigo" because of the diamond rings he wears on every finger and the splendor of his waist has my belongings. Romantic as the expedition may seem, it is thus only, a hunt for a suitcase.

I write this in the mood of defiance which the bombastic sun of Vigo gives one. I have steeped myself in the sun till I thought my limbs were on fire. The white heat licks up the streets and its flame beats and swathes one. How the sun enriches and empowers, pouring like gold coins out of a sack upon the sea, loading the roofs, blenching the walls till they are as white as bone! Houses ripen, shutters age, a rind of sunlight is in every brick and tile, on every face, till the city is like a great, coarse fruit that, over-face, till the city is like a great, coarse finite that, fipened, has dropped heavily to earth.

In London, the sun, like an arc lamp in a fog, dripped a watery, lilac light. That grayness followed us to Chera watery, mac light. I hat grayless followed us to Cher-bourg and the Bay of Biscay: we northerners eat fog and gray and drizzle. It was at La Coruña that we became aware of another power; there was clear light. We could see at last. The ocean ran high and royal.

Dome after dome of blue water rose loftily into brilliance, crumbled into a snow of foam, slid into dark and luminous troughs. There was a solidity and a lightness in the water. Each wave was a being. It rose, poised and arched downward like a school of porpoises. The sifted foam lay like an immense lace from horizon to horizon. The fishing boats of La Coruña, under their sling of sail, flew over and through these billows, with the deliberation of sea gulls.

The foam exploded upon them, spurted at them, the water sheeted them; now they were flat as a web of surf on the wave; now they were soaring or diving for the next one. They slit the wind and the sea with their speed, spume could not fly faster or sting harder.

It was at Vigo that we felt the sun. He seemed to step down the sky and put his face into mine. He hit out. You can feel him in your bones, your eyes, your hair. You seem to be drinking him. At Vigo, the wide bay hissed like metal with the heat and burned the edge of that little white pyramid of a town. On the night the boat swung into Lisbon, with the mountains stretched like tired dogs beside it. beside it.

How vulgar the liner seemed amid the bravado of sun and water, a wall of black iron with a white dressing of decks to it. There were the South Americans gobbling their Castilian as though it were a mouthful of spitting, hot potatoes instead of one of the finest languages in the world. The Argentinos had a gramophone which set their teeth chiming and their eyes glittering like tambourines, as they bent their hands and tapped their feet to tunes that clashed with all the stridor of Buenos Aires.

We all talked about voyages, races and trades, and we came to the inevitable conclusion that we were the finest people under the sun. (There is something in the saying that traveling has a narrowing tendency!) Meantime the ship's officer could not understand why anyone ever went

An English clerk confessed be was taking seven dozen dinner shirts with him to Santos, stolid in the determination not to be at the mercy of a Brazilian laundry. He told this to a Brazilian who drooped and looped himself about chairs and pillars like a violet, tropical convolvulus, who could not believe the story.

Every few minutes he repeated with a flaccid politeness: "Pero hombre siets dozena..."

"Pero hombre, siete docena-

"Pero, siete dice usted?-"

The source of the Englishman's prestige is his plodding

Spain lay beside us its torrid sepia slabs of land. At Vigo the Spanish emigrants came aboard, frightened and too excited at first to be sad, faces incised by the labor of the earth and the deeply scoring sun. It burns their eyes as black as grapes and there is a brightness in them.

As the boat left they were desolate, but after a few hours they began to cheer up; to fling themselves on the deck; to walk about. They kept their belongings in sacks and bundles near by. They sat on them. The women were small, shawled and with bright scarves tied over their small, shawled and with bright scarves used over their heads, and earrings swinging like little censers or coiled like tiny gilt serpents from their ears.

Oranges were brought out, the peel scattered. Olive oil appeared and the stench of it stood up in sickly beams like candle smoke. The young girls read new geography books. The men walked about. One of them, a small but sharp and lithe mountaineer, told me what he was going to do. There was no servility about. We spoke as man to man. He certainly had the best of it. He said:
"I am Asturiano. I am from Pravia, in the Province of Oviedo. You know it? Naturally you know it. Yes, sir; naturally! I am going to Buenos Aires. It is twenty days to Buenos Aires, you say? Well, it isn't. Nothing of the sort. It is sixteen days. Sixteen! You are wrong. I mean to say I have seen the notice and sixteen days it says.

"Why do I leave the Asturias? To get more money, clearly. I earn more money and then I shall return, for the Asturias is the most beautiful place in the world. What shall I do? Whatever presents itself. If good, well good. If bad, well bad. I paid 120 pesetas for my passage and it is enough. Now where do you come from? How old are you? What are you doing? Are you married? . . ."

There is a song about the men of Pravia, and the English of it goes something like this:

lish of it goes something like this:

I am from Pravia And my mother is a Praviana. For this reason There is no evil in me.

At night, with the lights of Spanish villages raked together like star dust on the mountains, the moon as big and tawny as a tambourine, and one hot white star pushed up the sky and slipping down again over Portugal as the boat rolled, the silence of the steerage deck was broken by songs of this kind. There was a man lying flat on the deck, and in that harsh, minor, quavery way learned from the Moors—the sound of it brought the very smell of Africa to the nostrils—he sang song after song I caught the first lines of a fisherman's chant:

Tell me bright fish Where are thy, little ones

There was always a sardonic touch to these songs, a grim humor grasped from the ups and downs of everyday living.

Somos pobres muchachos de Cadiz-z-z Y no sabemos apuntar A las muchachas de Cadiz-z-z Se las puede preguntar.

There is a cry with mockery from the people in that, the scorn of the northerner for the southerner—what country does not have that? The man sat up to sing again in a rasping voice. It has the raucous amusing mockery, and something of the peasant's shrewd insight into the causes of had government. into the causes of bad government:

Mi padre manda a mi madre-e-e Y mi madre me manda a mi-i-i Mi madra me manda a mi. (Quickly) Y yo manda a mis hermanos Todos nos mandamos acqui-i-i. (Loud Derision) The English of it lacks the resonance, the dignity, the nock heroic of the Castilian, and sounds vulgar beside it:

Father orders mother Mother orders me I order my brothers and sisters We all order one another about here.

I saw that afternoon a poignant sight in the steerage quarters. The sacks and bundles were piled up on the deck. The smell of the place! There was a sack with the

and roped onto the sack a fine, strong two-handled saw with its teeth protected by a strip of cane. Careful Don Francisco and his beloved saw. How many Spanish logs had he sawn with it? I wonder if it were he who later stood up on deck and shouted magnificently the song of which I have only the first words:

I am from Vigo, señores. And from no other place!

That is my destination. Tomorrow morning at seven o clock, if it is the pleasure of the Portuguese railway, I

The World's Great Capitals: The Week in Rome

THE spectacular recovery of the lira, which has now regained all the value it had lost during four and a half years of Fascist rule, is the main topic of conwhether the Italian Government proposes to follow the policy of further revaluation of the lira, or whether it ntends to stabilize it in the near future. It is certainly to be regretted that the severe press censorship prevents financial experts from stating their views on this vital question, but apparently the Government is determined at all costs to win the battle of the lira by its progressive revaluation. Apprehension has been expressed quarters that the disadvantages of the present Fascist monetary policy would be greater than its momentary gains, and that in the long run Italy would seriously fee the slackening of her export trade, which will certainly follow the rise of the lira.

Examining the trade returns for the first three months of the year the Popolo d'Italia, the organ of the Italian Prime Minister, points out that the adverse trade balance has diminished during that period by nearly half a milliard lire as compared with the first quarter of 1926. These figures, notes the Popolo d'Italia, speak for themselves and show that the apprehension mentioned above has no sound basis. Italy would gain more, the paper insists, by a gradual diminution of her imports, or at least by paying less for the goods she needs from other countries than by in creasing her exports. This policy may, perhaps, cause harm and loss to private individuals, but is certainly advantageous to the Nation as a whole.

Of late there have been a number of important archaec logical discoveries in different parts of Italy. At Rimini, during the course of restoration and enlargement of the local industrial school named after the Duce's father, Alessandro Mussolini, a large-sized ceiling came to light, beau-tifully decorated with frescoed panels and supported by finely sculptured capitals. The emblems and the monograms of the Malatesta, who ruled over Rimini for several centuries, are still clearly engraved on this ceiling, and it is conjectured that it belonged to one of the many palaces of the Malatesta family. Rimini, however, had another pleasant surprise in store for archæol men were digging the foundations of a new pavilion for the same school they came upon a mosaic pavement at the depth of about four meters from the surface.

As soon as it was brought entirely to light the pavement immediately appeared to be of exceptional historical and artistic interest. On one of its sides is a group of three animals, an antelope, a lion and a deer; round its center is a border of flowers and birds, a prominent figure being that of a peacock, of exquisite workmanship and bright colors. The pavement was found under the remains of a peacock, and the pavement was found under the remains of a peacock, and the pavement was found under the remains of a peacock, and the pavement was found under the remains of a peacock, and the pavement was found under the remains of a peacock, and the pavement was found under the remains of a peacock. medieval construction, and it is surmised that it dates to the Byzantine period or to the beginning of the first Roman Empire. The discovery is of the greatest historical interest, as it may enable historians to get some precise information about the early history of Rimini.

Cuma continues to render its hidden art treasures, and the latest discovery is that of two statues of Greco-Roman seen in the workmanship, unearthed at a little distance from the years ago.

acropolis of the old town. The first statue, which measures three feet nine inches in height, represents Neptune seated on a rock. His back is uncovered, but a mantle draped over the rest of the body and descending from the shoulders is gathered in rich folds on the knees. The is resting on the thigh and tightly clasps a small dolphin; the right arm is missing, but, according to the superintendent of the Naples excavations, it was raised to the trident. The second statue represents a female figure, with her head slightly moved to the left. The woman is wrapped in an ample tunic which covers her head as well. This figure reposes also on a rock, the feet resting on a footstool. Although the features have completely disappeared through erosion, it has been possible to ascertain that the sculpture is a work of the second century and represents Amphitrites, a sea-goddess.

A national institute for the production and distribution of cinematograph films of educational value and for propaganda purposes known as the "Luce" has recently been formed in Italy. Senator Filippo Cremonesi, the former Governor of Rome, is at the head of the institution, and the members of its council have been chosen by Signor Mussolini and comprise Italy's most eminent men in the political, archæological and artistic world. A law has been passed ordering the daily production of at least one educational film prepared by the Luce institute, in addition to other films shown in all the picture theaters of Italy. A great number of films have already been shown throughout Italy and about 400 new ones are in preparation; they are all of an educational or artistic character, and have proved to be a most successful contribution for the instruction, improvement and general culture of all classes. Among the recent films produced with great success are those showing the activities of the Duce, the battle of the grain, De Pinedo's preparation for his transoceanic flight, and, in general, others depicting the beauties of Italian cities and the colonies and the active daily life in shipyards and industrial establishments.

On April 21 last, the 2681st birthday of Rome, the On April 21 last, the 2681st birthday of Rome, the restoration of the Hypogeeum or Tomb of the Scipios on the Appian Road, outside the Porta Capena, was completed, and the general public was admitted for the first time to visit the historic spot. The tomb of the Cornelii Scipiones, which was discovered in 1780, is the most important tomb of the early Roman period which still exists. It is a small catacomb excavated in the tufa rock and is of quadrangular shape. Interments of the Scipio family went on here for about 400 years and additional chambers and passages had to be excavated from time to time. From and passages had to be excavated from time to time. From this Hypogæum the famous sarcophagus of Lucius Cor-nelius Scipio Barbatus, consul in 298 before the Christian Era and victor in the Sannite Wars, and a bust of the poet Ennius were removed by Pius VII to the Vatican, where Ennius were removed by Pius VII to the Vatican, v Ennius were removed by Pius VII to the Vatican, where they are still preserved in the Belvedere. The inscription on the former sarcophagus, in rude Saturnian verse, is one of the most important existing specimens of early Latin epigraphy. Many other inscribed slabs of peperino which were found within the tomb were all removed, and those now existing are modern copies. Through a labyrinth of steep narrow passages one reaches the burial-place of the Scipios, where the imitation stone sarcophagi can still be seen in the exact place where they were laid some 2000 years ago.
